

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Over the last twenty years, I have had the opportunity to work with many state employees. Almost without exception, I have found that they are a group of hardworking and dedicated people striving to improve the lives of people across the state. My experiences working on this book were similar. Throughout multiple state agencies, staff members were helpful in answering questions and in reviewing the book for accuracy. This book would have been impossible to write without their help.

I particularly want to thank Theresa Shackelford, Supervisor in the Life and Health Division, from the NC Department of Insurance. Over the years, she has been my primary contact when dealing with private health insurance questions, or when I have written other consumer education materials about health insurance. I also want to thank Carla Obiol, Deputy Commissioner, Senior's Health Insurance Information Program; Ted Hamby, Supervising Analyst, and Bob Lisson, Assistant Deputy Commissioner, from the Managed Care and Health Benefits Division; and Rebecca Hill, Senior Policy and Rate Analyst, Jean Holliday, Supervisor, and Donna Champion, Administrative Assistant, from the Life and Health Division of the NC Department of Insurance.

Andy Wilson, Supervisor of the Medical Eligibility Policy Unit, Barbara Brooks, Assistant Director of Recipient Services and Provider Relations, and Bruce Steel, Chief of the Community Care Section, at the Division of Medical Assistance were ever helpful in reviewing the Medicaid chapter, as was June Milby, Coordinator of NC Health Choice for Children, in reviewing the chapter on NC Health Choice. Gail Agrawal, Professor of Law, at the University of North Carolina School of Law was also helpful in reviewing the ERISA chapter.

Many people within the Division of Public Health contributed to the State Health Programs chapter. In particular, I want to thank Leah Devlin, Acting State Health Director. Thanks also go to Beth Rowe-West, Head of the Immunization Branch, Barbara Laymon, Vaccine Accountability Coordinator, Joe Holliday, Head of the Women's Health Branch, Alice Lenihan, Head of the Nutrition Services Branch, Carol Tant, Head of the Children and Youth Branch, Cheryl Waller, Children and Youth Branch, Diane Tyson, Children Special Health Care Needs Hotline, Laura Percenti, Regional Genetics Counselor, and Marilyn Asay, State School Nurse Consultant, from the Women and Children's Health Section; Bruce Parsons, Acting Chief, John Griswold, Public Health Program Manager, and Charles Reed, Former Director of the Pharmacy/Prescription Assistance Program, from the Health Promotion and Disease Prevention Section; and Rick Mumford, Chief of the Oral Health Section. Others I want to thank for providing information and feedback include: David Bryant, School Counselor, Instructional Support/Safe Schools Branch of the Department of Public Instruction; Victoria Byrd, Executive Director of the North Carolina Association of School-Based and School-Linked Health Centers; Jerry Wilkinson, Supervisor of the Developmental Evaluation Centers Program, from the Division of Early Intervention and Education; Duncan Munn, Division of Early Intervention and Education; Evelyn Foust, Head, and Judy Owen-O'Dowd, Special Projects and Policy Coordinator, from the HIV Prevention and Care Branch, Epidemiology Section; and Kimberly Scott, Graduate Student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

I would also like to thank Sally Syria, Chief of the Medical Eye Care Program, from the Division of Services for the Blind.

Several people from the Division of Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Substance Abuse Services provided invaluable feedback in their reviews. Many thanks to Bob Kurtz, Minority Affairs Specialist; Stan Slawinski, Chief of the Developmental Disabilities Section; Flo Stein, Chief of the Substance Abuse Services Section; Bert Bennett, Housing Capacity Development Coordinator, from the Substance Abuse Services Section; Don Willis, Chief of Adult Community Mental Health Services; Linda Gunn-Jones, Chief of Child and Family Services, and Carol Robertson, Chief of Behavioral Health Services.

John Price, Associate Director, and Tom Tucker, Community Consultant, at the Office of Research, Demonstrations, and Rural Health Development must also be thanked for their assistance in gathering information about Rural Health Centers. Elizabeth Freeman Lambar was also helpful in providing information about the Farmworker Health Program.

I owe thanks to several individuals at the North Carolina Primary Health Care Association (NCPHCA) for providing feedback on Community, Migrant, and Rural Health Centers, including Sonya Bruton, Executive Director, Stephanie Triantafillou, Migrant Health Specialist, and Laura Edwards, Director of Clinical Services. Aside from providing information, the NCPHCA, which held the copyright of the initial version of the book (as I was then an employee of NCPHCA), graciously allowed us to publish the second edition.

I would like to thank John Mills, Executive Director of the North Carolina Association of Free Clinics, for providing information about free clinics, as well as reviewing the chapter. Jeff Spade, Executive Director of the NC Rural Health Center at the NC Hospital Association provided help with the chapter on hospitals and EMTALA.

Thanks go to Janet Colm, President and CEO of Planned Parenthood of Central North Carolina, and to Walter Klausmeier, President and CEO, and Roberta Mazer, Director of the Office of Development, of Planned Parenthood Health Systems.

The North Carolina Area Health Education Centers (AHEC) deserve special thanks. Not only did Tom Bacon, Sue Isley and Phyllis Farlow provide information about AHECs, but they also provided funding to help publish the book.

This book was the result of more than two years of writing and editing. Aside from the people previously recognized, many other people who assisted in the writing, editing or overall support of this book deserve special recognition. I'd like to thank Jane Wettach, Senior Lecturing Fellow, at Duke University School of Law, who was my co-author on the first edition of this book. Her book, The Advocate's Guide to Assistance Programs in North Carolina (1993), was the genesis of this book. Emily Jane Costich helped gather some of the initial information for this book and was my colleague on other consumer education projects. I'd also like to thank Gordon H. DeFriese, President and CEO, and Kristie Weisner, Research Fellow, of the North Carolina Institute of Medicine who helped support this book by freeing up some of my time so I could write. Kelly Mullins, former Research Associate with the NC Institute of Medicine, Florence Nash, managing editor of the NC Medical Journal and Cammie D'Alpe, graduate student with the Cecil G. Sheps Center for Health Services Research deserve special thanks for copy-editing the book.

I couldn't have completed the book without the assistance of Asheley Cockrell Skinner, a doctoral student at the UNC School of Public Health, Department of Health Policy and Administration and my Research Assistant, who helped co-author this book. It was her research, writing, and organizational skills that helped make this book a reality. Finally, I would like to thank my husband, Jack Holtzman, and my children Danya and Rachel, who didn't grumble too much when I brought home chapters to write and edit.
